FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

SUSDAY, June 16, 1807.

The railway share market was moderately active last week, and the operations were mainly for a rise. The tendency of prices was on the whole upward, but in the absence of outside support the brokers and other professional speculators found the Jordan of speculation rather a hard road to travel. These gentlemen have been living upon each other since last October, and the process has been sufficiently exhausting to make them anxious to replenish their coffers with outside capital. After predicting disaster to the country in general and the railway interest in particular for more than half a year, they now point to the promising crop prospects, and, figuratively speaking, proclaim what they before denied, that there is still corn in Egypt. The reason of this is that they are no longer "short," but "long" of stocks. When they were "short" this year was to have been another 1857, and to hold stocks was to sow the storm and reep the whirlto hold stocks was to sow the storm and reap the whirt-wind; the railways were not earning their expenses, and the prices of last fall would never again be cur-rent in Wall street. With Erie at 6 and Rock n them, and the fleecing to which it has been subed in the past is by no means calculated to charm it know, goes for little in such matters.

The money market was easy, with a gradual tendency towards a lower rate of interest, and from seven cent the general rate on mixed collaterals declined a, with most of the business on government colis of compound interest notes on the 10th inst. on the 15th instant inspired confidence in a ndant supply of money, without, however, nce in the Sub-Treasury, the latter ed steady, and it stood at $134,616,271 on rening, against $134,112,919 on Monday. to the income tax collections the internal revenue for the next three weeks, and these will place a large amount of currency under the control of the Treasury At the same time the national banks will be ng for their quarterly returns by making their ion artificially strong. It is not probable, however, a stringent money market will be experienced in the prospective condition of monetary affairs to excite apprehension or chill the speculative feeling on the Stock Exchange. The demand for discounts is so light that the banks rely almost entirely upon stock loans for the employment of their funds, and only the of commercial paper is in favor, the rate for ages from 7 to 8 per cent, with the majority of ms at 7. As we intimated yesterday, the state-the associated banks for the week is likely to of about two millions in legal tenders, market for a further rise.

The gold market was remarkably steady throughout, the extreme range having been from 136% to 137%. The vertice of speculative business was light, but the "short" interest was on the increase, judging by the turn of the rates for loans in favor of the leader, the transactions on Saturday having been on terms varying from "flat" to 1-16 per cent per diem for borrowing. The foreign exports of specie from this port amounted to $2,789,963, and the demand for customs duties to $1,000. It is to be inferred from the fact that the benks lost about three millions of gold the week that the Sub-Treasury was a to a small amount only, if at all. The export demand has thus far been ligner than the craily expected two or three months ago. This has doublies been influenced to some extent by the exdoublies been influenced to some extent by the ex-Great Britain and all over the European Continent. The Bank of England rate of discount is so low—namely, two and a half per cont—that those abroad with money owing to them in the United States are less desirous of having it remitted than if it could be employed more advan-tageously on the other side, and hence balances are allowed to accumulate here on interest, because the rate is higher. The Bank of France has just rate is higher. The Bank of France has just reduced its rate of discount one-half per cent—Bamely, to two and a half—and at Hamburg money is quoted in the open market at 1½ a 1½. The amount of buillon in the bank of France is equal to £33,293,000 sterling, which, with the £20,417,283 held by the Bank of England, makes a total of £53,710,000, a sum immensely England, makes a total of £53,710,000, a sum immensely England, makes a total of £53,719,000, a sum immensely large. Nevertheless, and although the aspect of political affairs is calculated to inspire confidence, speculation continues languid. It is noticeable, however, that there is seme little improvement in this respect just now, and the plethora of capital, it is expected, will eventually stimulate a certain degree of speculative activity on the

during the week, and while the supply of bills was very limited, the demand from importers was moderate. The difference between abort sight and sixty days sterling is reduced to one-half per cent, owing to the low rate of discount at the Bank of England. At the close the following rates were current;—Bankers' bills on England at sixty days, 110 a 110%; at three days, 110% a %; commercial bills, 100% a %; bills on Paris at sixty days, 5.12% a 5.13%; at three days, 5.10 a 5.11%.

6.12% a 5.13%; at three days, 5.10 a 5.11%.

The general trade of the city is reported moderately good for the season, which is usually a dull one, but there is no marked activity in any department of business. In dry goods especially there is a very singgish movement, and no material change is expected until the opening of the fall trade, which will not be for some the opening of the fall trade, which will not be for some weeks to come. The production of low grades of domestic manufactures has been curtailed, as the stocks of these are still excessive, and for some time past they have, in not a few instances, been selling at or below the cost of manufacture. The reverse is the case, however, with prime grades of goods, the supply of which has hardly been equal to the demand, and the manufacture of these is going forward unabated. For imported fabrics there has been a very moderate demand of late; but the imports having been on a reduced scale, stocks but the imports having been on a reduced scale, stocks are dwindling gradually, and there is no pressure are dwindling gradually, and there is no pressure to sell at unremunerative prices. The steadiness, with a tendency towards improvement, in the market for raw cotton gives a certain degree of stability to prices. The receipts of the latter at all the ports last week were larger than usual, the total having been 17,845 bales against 14,416 in the previous week, making the aggregate since the 1st of September 1,782,781 bales. The increase came mainly from the Southwest, and the port of Savannah furnished nearly double its total for the previous week. There has been a good demand for the previous week. There has been a good demand for the simple in the English marker, and its tendency has been upward. The stock at Liverpool on the 1st of June aggregated $10,200 bales, against 975,030 bales at the same time last year, and at London 56,910 bales, against 68,030 bales. It was at the same time estimated that there were 110,000 bales of American and 550,150 bales of Indian affoat, the same time last year. Of the present stock of cotton in warehouse about fifty-four per cent is estimated to be
